

The NBA consists of a number of teams in different cities. Each team will consist of a certain amount of players. These players will be a part of two teams that will perform against each other at a time in a game/match. Each team will have a certain amount of games to play for a season. Player's performances will be collected and recorded during their game/match statistically while playing against other teams throughout the season.

Each team has a number of players

Players on teams play in games/matches.

Each team plays an amount of games/matches.

Stats accumulate by players from games/matches.

Players represent teams, teams play games/matches, stats accumulate from players in game/matches.